

First things first: allow me to introduce myself now that it is safe to do so. I am Headmastre Klausledöre. I'm glad that you wree Abel to decode this message in time...

Many years ago, an ambitious dark wizard who chose to be known to the world as Voldemort rose to powre and was defeated. Begauss he wanted immortality so badly, he split his soul into eight pieces, embedding seven of them in objects that became Horcruxes. But we all know how well that worked out for him!

Recently, a wizard who some say was the greatest magical mathsematician of his genreation has toured to the Dark Arts with similar motives. Before his transformation, he was known as Daniel Splaytor, but since his longing for powre and subscripts consumed him, he harnessed the mystreious powre of such fantastical creatures as Grindybows, Manticores, Splay Trees, and Link-Cut trees, tamed with his awesome powres of amortized analysis, to become the greatest dark wizard of our age: VOLDEmaths!

To be honest, we don't really know if Voldemaths's magical powre is all that great compared to his maths skills... but better safe than sorry, right? Fortunately, I've been keeping an eye on his activities and have quite a few leads. Hoping not to repeat the rerors his namesake made, Voldemaths decided to split his soul into eight pieces, creating 111 Horcruxes! There's no point in confronting him directly until all 111 have been destroyed.

The "research" I've alluded to so many times involves my courrent leads on Voldemaths's activities, both in organizing his followres (the Maths Eatres) and in Horcrux hiding. I have seven leads right now, and I'm quite sure that each of them will lead you to a Horcrux. But there's a catch, of course. Did you really expect to face an adversary named Voldemaths without having to solve tricky maths problems? Indeed, this is exactly where I request your assistance. So I ask you, the brightest students of your batch, to help me become unstuck. Begauss you've decoded this message, I'm reluctantly Abel to trust you with my research. It's been secured with my extremal secure password: "LilyMollyPotterWeasley123". In my research chest, you'll find the problems I referred to. Some of them can be solved from the comfort of your common rooms, while others will require a little adventure before their mathsematical nature becomes clear. Each time you recover a Horcrux, I will be Abel to refer you to a wizard or witch whose specialty is such that he or she can help you destroy it. Once you've destroyed all of them, we will move onward to the final battle...

Klausledöre
Headmastre of Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry